Dear Mr. Burton:

In accordance with your memorandum of 20 July 1961, I am enclosing two copies of a CIA native and employee handbook which have been distributed to employees of this Agency.

In addition to the current distribution of this material, I have instructed supervisors in the Agency to ensure that all employees review the handbook at least semi-annually. This instruction will be emphasized by periodically issuing appropriate directives.

Sincerely,

STAT

Since your recent visit to our offices, we have further reviewed the possibilities of an assignment for you with the result that we are prepared to process your application for the position of Security Investigator, GS-11. The basic pay for GS-11 is $7,960 per year and is subject to deductions for income taxes, civil service retirement, and optional insurance benefits.

Employment in this position would require a training period here in Washington, D. C., followed by duty assignment within the continental limits of the United States. Your duty assignment would be to a large city but would include responsibility for covering a substantial geographic area. The nature of your specific duties, principally that of conducting background investigations of applicants for employment, would necessarily entail considerable travel within your area. The particular location to which you would be assigned would depend on our staffing requirements when you become available for duty.

The salary indicated is somewhat below the range of your expressed interest and I believe a few words of explanation are in order. Your primary qualifications in law enforcement do not have direct application to our work since we do not have police powers or functions. The position described above appears to make the best use of your qualifications and to offer the best opportunity for you to progress to higher levels. Our grade range for this type of work is GS-9 ($6,435 per year) to GS-13 ($18,635 per year). Grade GS-11 is the highest level at which we believe an initial appointment can be made.

STAT

We follow the pay practices of most Federal agencies in granting periodic salary increases to employees who are performing their work satisfactorily. At GS-11, these increases are in $250 increments and are made at

I have gone into somewhat unusual detail about the career prospects of your employment with us because I appreciate the seriousness with which you must deliberate a change. You have advanced in your present work to a responsible position and have, I am sure, accrued various benefits such as retirement. For a man of your age and responsibilities, the decision to make a major change in employment is not an easy one and I am anxious to give you such facts as I can to assist you.

STAT If you conclude that you would like us to pursue this matter further, would you please complete and return to us at your earliest convenience the application forms which [redacted] gave to you. These are necessary before we can undertake the background investigation and other evaluative processes which are prerequisite to a firm offer of employment in our organization.

May I take this opportunity to thank you again for taking the time to visit our headquarters. I am pleased to be able to tell you that you made a most favorable impression in your various interviews and would be welcomed as a member of our service.

Sincerely,

/s/ Emmett D. Echols
